

MUSIC PROVING CONSOLATION OF ODESSA HUNGRY

People Turn Unconsciously to Music as a Distressed Child to Its Mother.

(By Associated Press) ODESSA, May 12.—(By Mail.)—Music, once the joy of the people of Russia, is now their consolation. They hunger for bread, and they long for music to make their unhappier days more bearable.

In passing the unlighted streets of the cities of the lower Volga, the stranger is, often guided by plump music bursting upon the darkness. Walking at early morning through the streets of Astrakhan, little boys and girls, often refugees, may be seen at the open windows, at practice thumping on dilapidated pianos. At the dreary stations, during the long waits, people sing. This kindly tolerated people turn to music for comfort as unconsciously as a distressed child to its mother.

They have no post war music, no jazz and pep and buzz saw compositions. There are the old, old songs of love lost, of the bitter-sweet of happiness gone, of the prisoner in his cell, of the "shadow o'er the heart."

Here in Odessa, of the Black Sea, there is and has been opera, good opera for several dreadful years. The fields outside the city are bare, the cemeteries are full, and new ones gape for more bodies each day. No home, no city, no war, no outbreak knows such sadness. The singers on the stage are hungry, so are the scene shifters; the musicians are hungry and so is the audience.

Yet each evening, through the darkening streets, thousands take their souls to the doors of the handsome opera house, thousands whose bodies are ragged with old clothes, whose stomachs are as empty as the field, but whose hearts yet respond to the magic of music.

The operas are sometimes those of Italy—"Tosca" and "La Traviata," but more often Russian. Pushkin, the famous poet, graced the city with his residence for many years, and so operas made from his stories are liked, "Mazepa," among others. One favorite is "Dobrovsky," the tragedy of a bandit, libretto by Pushkin, music by Napierovnik. This opera has a fine romance, a duet in the third act, when lovers sing and promise to be "always true, always the same." This really especially touches the audience. One remark is by a set stillness, rather than by tears.

The opera over, the singers and the men back stage slip into their coats, and the audience, as the lights go down, the music of the orchestra draw away, the audience in the seats and darkened and change and the unbroken darkness of the night.

CUTTING RODE WITH IMMORTAL SIX HUNDRED

Into the Mouth of Hell Dashed Iowa Man With Light Brigade in Crimean War.

(By Associated Press) CEDAR RAPIDS, Ia., June 6.—Elis Cutting of this city rode into the valley of death with the immortal six hundred.

Sitting at his home here this man who rode "into the jaws of death, into the mouth of hell," recalls the charge of the Light Brigade at Balaclava in the Crimean war. He saw Captain Nolan, suave young aide-de-camp of the British commander, Lord Raglan, dash up and hand Lord Lucan, cavalry commander, a note. Mr. Cutting, then a 15-year-old British trooper, did not know what the note contained. History says it contained these terse orders:

"Lord Raglan wishes the cavalry to advance rapidly to the front and try to prevent the enemy carrying away the guns—French cavalry is on your left."

Cutting saw his commander thrust that note into his glove before it was heard to ride away.

"Forward, the Light Brigade!" The command rang. There was a flash of sabers. Down into the valley dashes the line of British horsemen, to certain destruction.

Cutting, who for 45 years was a railroad employe at Iowa Falls and Cedar Falls, retired two years ago and is now making his home in this city. He is now 85 years old and was 17 when he enlisted in the 11th Hussars of Her Majesty, Queen Victoria. Mr. Cutting believes he is among the last, if not the last, of the men who were immortalized by Tennyson.

He vividly recalls the charge. He says he saw nothing, knew nothing, heard nothing, but felt within him the insane urge that drove him forward with a furious desire to bury his saber in a Russian breast.

CANDIDATES OF G. O. P. WILL FULFILL DATES

Scientific Plan Evolved Whereby Engagements Can be Filled Without Disappointments

The republican candidates, national and state, will be taken care of in a most scientific manner this fall if a new plan which has recently been evolved is adopted by the leaders of the party.

In the past the itinerary of the candidates was made up in Reno, dates announced and the candidates started off on schedule time, only to find it was impossible to meet audiences on dates set down and announced by the state central committee.

Under the new idea the state will be divided into districts, and a district committee appointed at state headquarters, which will have full charge of the visiting candidates during their canvas within the apportioned territory.

The district which will embrace Tonopah will begin at Mina, where the candidates will be met. The district will extend south to Las Vegas where the committee will turn over the candidates to the new committee, but will remain and assist in the work.

This committee will be independent of any county committee and will work in harmony with county committees and arrange meetings with the county candidates, wherever and whenever possible.

The idea is a most creditable one and will meet approval of all county candidates who are compelled to pay their assessments and tag along with a party of celebrities who obscure the present of the local office seeker.

HORNSILVER IS SHOWING MUCH REAL ACTIVITY

Several Properties Receiving Attention With Excellent Showings of Ore

Hornsilver continues to show much activity in a mining way and several properties are receiving well-merited attention, with a splendid mineral showing being in evidence. The Roanoke company is employing quite a force of men and two shafts are being sunk that have attained depths of 80 and 60 feet respectively. A fine vein of ore averaging about 240 tons in gold and silver is being followed, and there is on the dump of the 80-foot shaft a large amount of ore that will be treated in due course of events.

Adjustments of legal controversy on two of the larger properties will probably be concluded within the next few days, and at that time new life will be injected into the camp. It is said that these matters have about nearly been adjudicated, and with the state clean and with no further chance of litigation, the district should hum merrily along and rapidly develop a number of substantial producers.

PAYMENT IS MADE GOLD MTN. GROUP

Henry W. Bruner and associates have made the second payment on the Taylor claims at Gold Mountain, recently optioned by them. Bruner, who is in charge of the work, has cleaned to the bottom a 50-foot shaft and is now drifting both ways at the bottom. These drifts are being advanced in high grade gold ore, some of it showing free gold. This is the same shoot which at 20 feet in this shaft led to the option being taken. If the work now being done is successful a 300-foot tunnel will be driven to cut the vein at a depth of 300 feet.

Taylor in the Gold Bug claims, not included in the group of five optioned to Bruner, recently mined three tons of $113 ore. The group optioned by Bruner and also the Gold Bug adjoins the noted old Nevada Empress mine on which it is reported work is to be resumed on a small scale in the near future.

Taylor has developed claims at Gold Mountain for more than 15 years and it may be that he is to obtain a hard-earned reward for his persistence. The district is rich, but aside from the Empress, which is said to be far from well prospected, although a big production has been made, comparatively little work has been done.
